A century-old home built on the Chao Praya River for a Thai prince is today the backdrop for three traditional wooden villas designed by architect Dulpichai Komolvanich. Each of the six themed rooms boasts luxurious beds, polished wood floors, air-conditioning and humidity controls, and sumptuous bathrobes and slippers, along with a spacious veranda overlooking the central garden. The modern Chinese Suite is composed of two bedrooms and lavishly furnished. In addition to the phenomenal quarters, the hotel also offers guests canoes and bikes, canal tours, spa services and a gorgeous dining room serving recipes from the royal family.
